Public school districts in New York State are facing historically dramatic challenges. We know that the greatest portion of school budgets rests with the costs associated with personnel. Attaining the knowledge and skills necessary to make intelligent human resources decisions is an invaluable skill set for school administrators. Such a skill set is fueled and regenerated through regular professional growth within the field of school personnel administration.

The New York State Association of School Personnel Administrators has flourished over the past 44 years through dedicated membership. NYSASPA is an association marked by genuine collegiality amongst professionals who are committed to the improvement of human resources practices across New York State. Through our listserv, regional associations and state-wide networking we make New York State seem small as we help each other out on a daily basis with difficult personnel matters.

If you are an active public school administrator in New York State, interested in gaining or furthering your professional expertise within the field of school personnel administration, you will greatly benefit from NYSASPA membership. Once a member, you will find our 2009 Fall Conference, coordinated by Mr. Fino Celano, NYSASPA President-Elect and our state-wide conference planning committee, to be one of the most valuable professional experiences you will gain.

For a glimpse of last year's conference topics, go to our Annual Conference link and open the 2008 Annual Conference link. We look forward to seeing you in Cooperstown this coming fall!

Paul M. Connelly, Ed.D.
